Jay Harris is a name a lot of Old Dominion University students may recognize. He is an alumnus of ODU, a recipient of the Distinguished Alumni Award and an anchor on ESPN's SportsCenter. Harris graduated from ODU in 1987 and was the keynote speaker for the 100th commencement ceremony in 2003. This week he visited his alma mater and appeared at several events for the Department of Communication & Theatre Arts, where he earned his degree.

In the signature event of his visit, Harris held an informal “conversation” at Chandler Recital Hall with fellow broadcasting alum Mitch Brown ‘15, touching on everything from his 30-plus-year career as a broadcaster to how students can break into the challenging profession.

“You’re still telling stories,” Harris told Brown about how the industry has changed. “There’s so many modes of distribution now. It’s there, you can do it. But don’t forget the basics. If you can’t write, if you can’t tell a story, you can’t convey information, you’re no good to me.”

Harris grew up in Chapel Hill, N.C., which heavily influenced his decision to attend Old Dominion.

“I chose Old Dominion because it reminded me of my high school in Chapel Hill,” he said. “I knew I was going to college in the Hampton Roads area because I wanted to spend time with my dad, and ODU just felt right.”

Harris didn’t originally intend to focus on sports. He held an interest in journalism because he had taken a career aptitude test that suggested it as a career for him.

“I scored well in the area of interpersonal skills, and journalism was a suggested career field,” he said. “I’ve always like to write, and talk, so I made my decision right there.”

After graduating from Old Dominion, Harris worked as a weeknight news anchor for WPGH-TV in Pittsburgh, Pa., for about 12 years. When his contract was nearing its end, he decided to send his reel to a friend for a critique.

“He worked at ESPN,” Harris said. “He showed my tape around, and they liked me. I wasn’t looking for a job in sports. I’d spent 12 years working in news. They brought me in for an audition and interview, and the rest is history.”

On his visit, Harris also held a brown bag lunch with student-athletes in Communication & Theatre Arts, conducted a workshop with television broadcasting students and delivered a lecture in a new media technologies class.
KUDOS!

BRITTNEY HARRIS has accepted the position of Assistant Professor in our Theatre Program. Brittney has been with us this past year in a visiting role and has been an amazing contributor to our department!

MA-LSDC student CAROLINA OSPINA-RODRIGUEZ recently participated as a speaker in a Panel Session of the Global Certification Program, led by ODU’s Visa and Immigration Service Advising Office. The session, where she presented with international students from Mexico, Nigeria, and Korea, centered around “Superstitions Around the World.”

Adjunct Instructor MICHAEL BIBBO was a key creative on a recent WHRO show, Mission Critical, the story of NASA Langley Research Center’s contributions to the Apollo moon landing.

Dr. Kate Lockwood Harris to Speak on Sexual Violence on Campuses

Sexual harassment and sexism in higher education will be the focus of a campus talk later this month sponsored by our Department.

Dr. Kate Lockwood Harris, an assistant professor of organizational communication at the University of Minnesota, will speak from noon to 2 p.m. March 23rd in the Chesapeake/Portsmouth Room at Webb University Center. Her book, Beyond the Rapist: Title IX and Sexual Violence on U.S. Campuses, focuses on how colleges and universities are talking about and responding to the epidemic of sexual violence on campuses. This talk will be a springboard for a discussion about larger systems of injustice, including the overt and covert forms of sexism and sexual harassment experienced by faculty and graduate students.

Dr. Harris says, “Sexual violence is pervasive on college campuses. Whether we know it or not, every one of us is directly or indirectly impacted by assault. As humans, the ubiquity of this problem demands our collective attention.” Harris’s speech is intended to start a conversation among faculty members and graduate students about the kinds of sexism that faculty may encounter, adds Avi Santo, Chair of the Departments of Communication & Theatre Arts.

“Without question, sexual harassment and sexism are leading contributors to many women leaving higher education or impacting career choices, including advancement,” Santo said. “This is a significant retention issue, and it is a major factor in faculty development. Yet, while most focus is on inappropriate faculty/student relationships, hostile environments for female and LGBTQ faculty are often overlooked.”

“I’m interested in how colleges and universities can transform the current culture of sexual violence,” Harris adds, “The problem is about educational equity and accessibility, and communication plays a crucial role in the changes higher education needs.”

Lunch will be provided at the talk on March 23rd. Space is limited, so please RSVP to commdeptevents@gmail.com.

Dr. Kate Lockwood Harris’s talk is sponsored by The Departments of Communication & Theatre Arts, English, Sociology & Criminal Justice, World Languages & Cultures, Philosophy & Religious Studies, Women’s Studies, The Institute for the Humanities, The College of Arts & Letters, The Center for Faculty Development, and The Office of Faculty Diversity & Retention.

Our Brown Bag series continues, where our faculty present works in progress to their colleagues for the purposes of a) sharing their research, b) generating conversation, and c) building community. Presenters at the Brown Bag series offer short informal 10-12-minute presentations of ongoing projects and then we open the floor up to questions. This is a great way to learn about what colleagues and professors in other parts of the department are doing.

We always look to pair a person on the COMM side with an artist on the DANCE/FILM/THEATRE side. All are welcome (and we also provide a virtual option), including grad students (and select undergrads if the presenter wants them there).

Our fourth Brown Bag will be in the University Theatre (1002) at 12:30-1:30 PM. JIM LYDEN, MFA and DR. FRAN HASSENCAHL will be presenting. Topics will be forthcoming.

Junior Faculty Research Mentoring Program for 2020-21

The Office of Research invites submissions for the 2020-2021 Junior Faculty Research Mentoring Program (JFRMP). The JFRMP program supports ODU faculty-to-faculty mentoring by pairing a senior faculty member with a track record of extramural funding, and a junior tenure-track faculty member who wants to be mentored and commits to submitting a competitive funding proposal at the end of the mentoring period. The focus of mentoring activities must be on identifying funding sources and the development of a strong extramural grant proposal, not on increasing expertise/ recognition within the discipline.

Mentees must be tenure-track assistant professors with fewer than 4 years at this rank, who are at least two years away from a tenure decision at the time of application.

There are two categories of JFRMP awards, Track I and Track II:

• Track I supports faculty members in disciplines where competitive extramural grant funding of $250,000 (in direct costs over the life of the award) or more is available.

• Track II supports faculty members in disciplines where competitive extramural grant funding of $250,000 or more is not a viable option. Track II applications require the advance approval of the Director of Research Development.

Submissions are due by 5:00 p.m. on March 23, 2020. For detailed information on the Junior Faculty Research Mentoring Program please visit this link.
