Grade Forgiveness

Graduate programs may provide for grade forgiveness to their students. Such policies regarding what courses are eligible, how many times a student may seek forgiveness, and any other restrictions must be written in program requirements. Programs are not required to offer grade forgiveness; students should be aware that their degree program may not provide this option.

Seeking and receiving approval for grade forgiveness may affect graduate assistantships, tuition waivers, and/or financial aid. Students should consult with their graduate program director and/or financial aid advisor accordingly prior to seeking grade forgiveness.

Does this go to faculty senate?

Commented [A2]: As background, EVMS offered graduate grade forgiveness, but ODU did not. This policy is open enough so that Masters programs can have different guidelines than Doctoral. These should be very uncommon and will be processed manually by the registrar.
